Liang Quan (b. 1948, Shanghai; ancestral home Zhongshan, Guangdong) is one of the most representative figures in Chinese abstract painting. He graduated from the Affiliated High School of the Zhejiang Academy of Fine Arts and later studied at the Academy of Art College (now Academy of Art University) in San Francisco. Liang previously taught in the Printmaking Department of the Zhejiang Academy of Fine Arts (now China Academy of Art) and worked at the Shenzhen Fine Art Institute. He currently lives and works in Shenzhen.

Liang Quan is among the earliest Chinese artists to integrate traditional ink painting into abstract practice, developing a highly distinctive visual language that bridges Eastern and Western aesthetics while preserving their essential differences. His work constitutes a sustained meditation on representation and abstraction, negotiating between form and formlessness to reconstruct order through subtle, meticulously layered details.

Through controlled gradations of ink wash and the gradual dissolution of form, reality is articulated through accumulated layers—concealed, reconfigured, and ultimately re-emerging in a state that appears to verge on disappearance. In Liang's work, emptiness conveys boundlessness. His deliberate restraint and refusal of fixed meanings reflect a non-confrontational stance toward a rapidly shifting world.

Liang's most emblematic works, his ink-wash collages, evoke a sense of calm and expansive Zen contemplation. By employing mixed-media collage, he forges a dialogue between Western abstract art and the Chinese ink tradition. Rooted in profound Eastern philosophy and marked by a singular aesthetic vision, his work continues to resonate globally, bridging East and West through a subtle, contemplative abstraction.
